World's Market Requirement

All employers of the services sector via, BPO, IT, Medicine, Engineering, Chartered accountancy, law, banking, finance, marketing and many more service sectors have their businesses conducted in English. Only few people are well versed in English and mostly form the rich and the upper middle class. But together they own over average ratio of the national resources. The starting salary package of a graduate from English medium is typically 50 to 60 percent higher than his counterpart from any other language. There is an immediate need of imparting communicative English training to trillions of students in high schools and colleges who have lack of fluency in the English language. We also have a vast market among the businessmen and professionals who find that not being fluent in English is becoming a hurdle for their career growth. Housewives who are eager to enhance their fluency and personality for the upbringing of their children form another formidable customer base. There are 193 countries in world with unthinkable population and their youth ready to be fluent in English, enhance their personality and hone up their GD/PI skills to land up a good job or to improve the effectiveness, profitability and efficiency of their present pursuit. Researches have revealed that people prefer to learn from organized professional institutes having the international presence.

Introduction and current scenario

In world, the medium of instruction in majority of rural and urban schools is the regional language. English is now being introduced as a second or third language at the primary level. However, even after few years of its compulsory study, many high school students are unable to speak, read or write simple English phrases and sentences. Most of the public school in world resort to teach a few commonly used sentences in English and thus only tend to develop a hitch in students for speaking in English as the medium of study and the lack of English education only deprive students from pursuing higher\professional courses. It is rather ironical that an average job entrant is technically competent but lacks communication skills. Across the length and breadth of the country, Indians are learning English at any cost. People are taking loans, taking time off, traveling to their nearest big cities to pick up the language they believe will give them social mobility, faster career paths and the way to the world. Learning English has now become a necessity with and a booming service sector. Therefore whether we like it or not it's the language of higher education and business in world. In a multicultural and diverse country like India with many different language and dialects it seems to be emerging as a second language which is making it easy for people to communicate. According to the British council, English has official or special status in more than 75 countries and is the main language for international business and academics. It is thus the lingua franca of the world. Moreover in world, the services sector, that has become the backbone of the world economy with its contribution to the GDP being more than 50% uses English as the only official language.
